

Why Buy American Made Union Products?

Consumerism, it is a part of everyday life. One shops and throws things into the basket, not truly thinking about how it affects others. Who knew shopping could affect more than just us? Consumerism affects a world of people and can even affect one's livelihood. Unions are effected everyday by the things society purchases, and the fate of them is in the hands of America.

America established unions for the working class to protect individual freedoms and privileges. Essentially a brotherhood was formed giving middle class workers basic rights that would help ensure the safety and proficiency of all American made goods. They have secured that every worker under a union has a substantial work environment, livable wages to provide for their families, and health care benefits. Unions are the backbone of Americans and have secured millions of United States families with jobs, now it is America's turn to support union workers by giving back to the companies that support them.

America was founded on immigrants and relied on international trade to support their economic lifestyle. As time passed America became more independent and relied further on its own advantages in American corporations and products. These products established by Ford motors, Johnson&Johnson, and Hasbro have all established pride and commitment back into the United States. As the economy has been drastically affected by pay cuts and inflation, some of these companies have been forced to compete with budget costs as well. American citizens have even sought out to foreign products because of lower prices. This has caused a strain on the American production line and has cut down the number of jobs available to citizens. While we should be preserving every job opportunity we have, American companies like G&M Motors will soon be moving overseas manufacturing Cadillac's in China in the upcoming years. When Americans wake up in the morning and complain about the cost of gas and milk, they should think where is all their hard earning American money being spent. They have a foreign car sitting in their driveway and their closets are filled with clothes made from Chinese manufacturers. If America spent a few extra cents on goods purchased by American products instead of foreign goods we would be investing back into our economy, manufacturers, corporations, and future generations to come.

American sweat, blood, and time have been spent on creating high-quality products to the American consumer. When one buys American products they know they are receiving high-quality goods that will sustain a lifetime. Buying American is a guarantee to each customer that there will be more jobs created and that the revenue made will be distributed back into the country. Paying the couple extra dollars for each product will ensure safety regulations, labor laws, and secure jobs for the future generations to come. Other countries do not abide by environment health codes allowing toxins to pollute our air quality. Also, other countries do not have labor laws and allow children and workers to perform in unsafe environments. When it comes to America we have to stand up and fight for our independence, our unions, our brotherhood, and our future contributions to come.

America was based on neighbors, community, and a sense of security that all United States citizens will lend a helping hand in a time of need. Every United State citizen is given the opportunity to excel and succeed in the workforce. Society is majority run by the middle class but as time passes the middle class and union work is diminishing from the economic decline. Buying American made products is an investment that will enrich the lives of millions of U.S. citizens. Currently companies such as Wal-Mart, Apple, General Electrics, and Brooks Brothers are all trying to make more products in the United States. Even Japanese Toyota's are slowly being manufactured in the United States now. Companies such as these are instilling the benefits of American products and creating more job opportunities, now it is up to the rest of America to put in their part and buy American union products.
